NUMB. 1538

TUESDAY, JULY 22. 1740.

N°. 1586.

IRELAND.

Dublin, July 15.

THE following is the Account given by the Captain of the John of Waterford, now here, taken by a Spaniſh Privateer the 29th of January laſt, and carried into Vigo; who being ſome time there, went to Oporto, and there got on board one of our Ships, but had the Misfortune to be a ſecond Time, the 8th of April, and carried Ferrol, by three Spaniſh Men of War who were on a Cruize.

Says, that theſe three Spaniſh Men of War went in Company with the Princeſſa, on board of which was the Admiral; but ſhe having receiv'd Damage two Days before, the Admiral quitted Order'd her into Port, and went on board one of the Ships, which were join'd by twelve Men of War from Cadiz. The Princeſſa being ſeparated from them by a Storm, fell into the Hands of the Engliſh.

At Ferrol there are four French Barks, which go out two at a time, and cruize along the Coaſts as far as to give them an Account of what Ships are on the Coaſts, and each of them have a Spaniſh Captain on board. As they were going in they were met by one of theſe French Barks, who ſaid they were boarded by an Engliſh Man of War, but before ſhe came up with them, they put the Spaniſh Captain into a Hogſhead with the Head on it, and the Engliſh Captain ſwore they were all Frenchmen let them go.

The Spaniſh Admiral being acquainted that Admiral Balchen was cruizing off Ferrol with ſix Men of War, ſent an Expreſs to his Court to be inform'd how he ſhould act; by which the Court ſent him a diſcretionary Power. They were three Weeks after the Receipt of it putting their Ships in order to go out; but Three Days before he left it thirteen Men of War ſail'd out of the Mouth of the Harbour, and there caſt Anchor, as if they were to be join'd by the two Admiral Ships, one of which having a faulty Maſt was refitting.

They kept him for ſome Time a Priſoner on board one of their Men of War, where he had the ſame Allowance as their own Men, which is very poor; a Man having but half a Pound of very bad Beef a Day, three Nagins of Wine, and other Things in Proportion. He ſays that the Allowance for nine is not enough for five; yet they ſeem in good Heart, and to keep them ſo, they are told that next Spring they are to be joined by the French, and then invade England, of which they are ſo certain of making a Conqueſt that they ſay they would not give three Pence for all they are it. Thoſe brave Men who promiſe themſelves the Kingdom of Ireland, dare not come out with Admiral Balchen was cruizing off their Harbour with ſix Men of War only, they having at that time Ships of the Line well mann'd in Ferrol. He obſerves that the Sailors work their Veſſels very badly.

The Harbour of Ferrol is one of the ſtrongeſt in all Spain: It has ſo narrow an Entrance, that but one Ship can ſail in at a time, and only with a Wind that blows directly in, the Hills being very high on each Side. On each Side of it there are ſeveral ſmall Forts, which hold 20 and 30 Men, ſome made of Wood and others Stone, and about half way in, on the South Side, is Fort St Philip, moſt of which is Bomb Proof, it mounts 160 Guns, and will contain upwards of 2000 Men; on the other Side there are 2 ſmall Forts, one of 30 and the other of 20 Guns; theſe 3 Forts form an Angle; when you paſs theſe you come into a ſpacious Harbour, where 200 Ships of War may ride.

When the Captain was there they had but very few Land-forces; and he ſays, were they at that time Invaded, and but a few Men landed at the Entrance of the Harbour, they might take their Forts, and make an eaſy Conqueſt of the Place. 'Twas ſaid that they had 20000 Men in and near Galicia, and good Intelligence from England.

He left it the 23 of May, when 20 Ships of War were there all ready to ſail, and as above, 13 lying in the Mouth of the Harbour waiting for their Admiral; but where they intended to go he could not learn.

The above Captain in his Return to England, was chaſed near Guernſey by a Spaniſh Shallop, and were it not for a French Man they bore up to, they would have been taken. When he arriv'd at England he was ſent for by Sir Charles Wager, and gave the above Account to him. When he was firſt taken he wrote to a Friend in Portugal an Account of the Cadiz Fleet arriving at Ferrol, which Letter was ſent to Sir Charles Wager, and was the firſt Account given of the two Squadrons joining.
